Colour Coding

To maintain PRS Household Services' rigorous hygiene standards, please use the following colour coding, ensuring that certain cleaning products and equipment are only used in specific areas.

RED		Cleaning high-risk areas, such as toilets and urinals.
------------	---	--

Red represents high-risk and is used to denote areas such as toilets and urinals, as well as washroom floors.

YELLOW		Cleaning in lower-risk areas, such as bathroom sinks.
---------------	--	---

While red products are used for washroom toilets and floors, yellow products are used for other washroom surfaces and sinks, ensuring no cross-contamination between the two (despite being in the same vicinity).

GREEN		Cleaning food preparation areas such as kitchens.
--------------	---	---

Green is used for food preparation areas such as kitchens. Uncooked fish and meat pose a high risk of cross-contamination. Therefore, it is crucial to segregate cleaning materials used in these areas.

BLUE		General-purpose cleaning, such as mirrors & windows.
-------------	---	--

Blue is used for low-risk areas, such as classrooms and offices. Since there is a low risk of cross-contamination, these products can be used for a wide range of surfaces, including desks, hallways, window ledges and general dusting and polishing.
